AND

INTRODUCTION

Southwest Arabia for long has been a relatively neglected area of study; published works on this region are fairly few in number and very varied in nature. This bibliography has been compiled in order to provide an up-to-date guide to the range of material available in European languages.

Material in the bibliography generally has been classified into two sections: the Yemen Arab Republic and the People's Democratic Republic of Yemen (once Aden Colony and Protectorate). In some cases this division is purely arbitrary as many nineteenth century works use the term 'Yemen' and 'Arabia Felix' to refer to the whole area, whilst in the twentieth century, the term 'Yemen' is sometimes used to refer to the Northern Yemen alone.

The paucity of published works on the Yemens in part reflects the peripheral position of interest which they occupied until the 1930's and 40's within the larger region of the Middle East which itself has only become of central importance to Western interests during the same period. Even now neither of the Yemens possess oil reserves or offer opportunities for large-scale foreign investment. Even the importance of the Red Sea shipping route was deflated by the discovery that between 1967 and 1975 the world survived very well without the Suez Canal. Nevertheless, the geopolitics of the Indian Ocean, the socio-political instability and the economic problems not only of S.W. Arabia but also of the lands across the Red Sea narrows, are combining to make the Yemens a more important focus of interest to neighbours and distant powers than they have ever been before.

Many governmental and international agency reports which have begun to flow in increasing volume since 1970 are difficult to obtain. A selection of the most important of these is made in an appendix to serve at least as an indication of contemporary lines of applied work, mainly associated with development.

Acknowledgement is made to Dr. John H. Stevens and Dr. Russell King whose researches provided a basis for this bibliography. Also to Miss Avril Yeates who prepared this bibliography for publication.

APPENDIX

This section contains an indication of the range of government, semi-official and United Nations agencies publications. Although these publications are not normally available except in such institutions as the Middle East Centre at Durham, it was felt that their inclusion would compensate for the lack of secondary material available.
